

<http://www.lifehack.org/articles/productivity/7-online-tools-that-improve-your-business-writing.html>

In this article “7 Online Tools that Improve Your Business Writing” written by writer, editor, and private writing tutor Veronica May, advocates seven different websites and applications available to help on improve one’s business writing pieces. The most exciting part of these resources is that most of the services and tools that they offer are free to use. Each of the seven resources that Veronica suggests provide different aspects with improving one’s business writing, such as ones that can help you brainstorm ideas in a variety of ways, another that will have real-time communication and collaboration with tutors, students, and teachers to interact with, and also one that will not only check your grammar for you, but will also offer a “personal writing coach [to] further enhance your writing”.

This article relates to the assigned topic for this Biz Buzz post discussion because it is directly related to business writing with the consideration this Biz Buzz discussion is also writer’s choice. Also, information represented in this article relates to the class because it can allow us take what we learned what to write in the industry and improve it even further, which can also provide a great interest to individuals in the class.